About

I'm a board certified emergency physician and attorney. I graduated from Chicago Medical School and Stanford University Law School and completed a residency in Emergency Medicine at Stony Brook University Hospital in New York. I worked for the Surgeon General, as well as for the Chairman of the Labor & Human Resources Committee. Currently I work as an emergency physician on the frontlines whether or not there is a pandemic. My clinical work serves all Americans: from urban-inner city, to suburban, to the IHS. My legal work has focused on conflicts between hospitals and insurers. I write on policy issues relating to law and medicine.

I offer clients the same high level of information and guidance that C-level executives expect in other areas of their lives. I work the same way as a highly effective Fortune 100 CEO. To find the best answer for each client-situation, I read the latest research, consult with the foremost experts, examine the scientific literature, and help my clients make the best choices. Taking the right steps at the critical moment can mean the difference between forever living with a serious impairment or enjoying good health.

Excerpt from the above article: On May 12, 2017, the United States Supreme Court issued its decision in Seila Law v. Consumer Financial Protection Bureau, 581 U.S. 413, 137 S.Ct. 1324, 138 L.Ed.2d 1483 (2017). The Court held that the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) is not an independent agency, but rather, is part of the Federal Reserve System. This decision has significant implications for the CFPB's ability to regulate financial products and services.	Sample Root Cause Analysis & Plan

Excerpt from the above article: The American Medical Association (AMA) has long been a vocal proponent of physician autonomy and control over their own medical practices. However, in recent years, the AMA has become increasingly concerned about the impact of government regulations and policies on the medical profession. This has led to a number of high-profile cases and lawsuits, including the recent Seila Law v. CFPB decision.	Sample Physician Advocate Letter
